Snuff, Made From Dark Tobacco, May Be Coming Back

You probably know that some of tobacco produced in this section is made into snuff, but did you know that the use of snuff is INCREASING?

Government statisticians have on hand figures that show that 35,000,000 pounds of snuff were sold in the United States in 1933. And for that same year 191,000,000 pounds of smoking tobacco were sold.

That means that in 1933 nearly one-sixth as much tobacco was snuffed as smoked.

Snuff users are traditionally shy about it. One seldom hears folks talk about it, or sees them use it, but they do.

Here are official figures:

1933: 36,000,000 pound of snuff.
1908: 24,000,000 pounds.
1897: 13,000,000 pounds.

Many users have discontinued the use of snuff. People are said to be timid about buying it. It has been banned from the elegant list of social vices. The little, black oblong snuff box has made its exit from society. But the sale of snuff goes on.

Snuff has quite a history. As far back as 1624 Pope Urban the eighth issued a bull upon the use of snuff during church services. Those who did were threatened with excommunication. It was claimed that his snuffing and sneezing interfered with the dignity of the service.

In the mauve nineteenth century he reformers made it so hot for the snuff users that the addicts left off using small boxes to get their snuff for them when they wanted a good sneeze.

But snuff had its inning in the drawing room. Beau Brummel was so much admired for his delicate employment of the hand-decorated snuff box as for other attributes. Napoleon Bonaparte was a snuff user. So was Catherine de Medici, Frederick the Great, Marie Antoinette and Archbishop Whatley. The battle of Waterloo saw two great snuff users opposing each other in Napoleon and the Duke of Wellington.

Snuff reached another hey-day in Here's a recipe for the official method of savoir faire in snuffing: Take the snuffbox in the right hand, pass it to the left hand, rap the box, open it, offer to all others present, place the snuff in the nose.

Farm Income Larger

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics expects farm income during the first six months of 1935 to be larger than in the same period of last year. Receipts from the sale of crops in January this year dropped 21 per cent below those of last year, but livestock receipts were up 32 per cent.

An advance of 2 points in the purchasing power of farm products is also reported for the month ending February 15. The mid-February purchasing figure of 87, the economists say, was the highest reported since June 1930. Corn, oats, barley, cottonseed and truck crops are bringing parity prices or better.

Prices for dairy products are the highest in more than four years; demand has improved and production has declined.

In spite of these improvements, prices of many farm commodities are still below parity and the Agricultural Adjustment Administration is not considering abandonment of any adjustment program now in effect.

Thomas B. Hall, who has been manager of the Dark Fired Tobacco Growers Marketing Association, has resigned and will become connected with the land utilization program in Washington.
